Who are we?

The Alfred Gillett Trust was established as a charitable entity in 2002 and our collections represent one of the most preeminent corporate collections in the world, comprising material which illustrates the outputs of almost two centuries of shoemaking and testifies to the charitable and political interests of the Quaker Family who founded Clarks Shoes.

Our vision is to inspire the world with the family and community stories behind Clarks shoes. Our mission is to provide engaging spaces for developing and sharing stories of the collections we care for. Our values guide the manner in which we work and function as an ethical compass:

- Inclusion: everyone feels welcome
- Learning: inspiring curiosity
- Collaboration: maximising potential
- Sustainability: optimising opportunities
